Warsaw, January 26.

ON the 20th Instant, the Session of the Lower House was adjourned to the 22d, by reason of the Indisposition of their Marshal.

On the 22d, the Marshal acquainted the House, that M. Jablonowsky Palatine of Russia, desired an Audience; upon which a Deputation was appointed to introduce him: Being come in, he was seated between the Deputies of Crakow and Sandomitz; and represented to the Assembly, that his Father the late Castellain of Crakow, having served the Republic in Quality of Commander in Chief of their Forces, contracted great Debts for the publick Service, of which not having been reimbursed, he the Son, though he had paid about 800000 Florins of it, was notwithstanding still at the Mercy of his Creditors, the whole Debt amounting to above a Million; that therefore he applied to the Body of the Nobility for Relief in so just a Case, his Father having hazarded his own and his Family's Fortune to save the Nation from Ruin in very critical Junctures. The House hereupon passed a Vote, that at their next Conference or Conjunction with the King and the Senate, the Marshal should recommend and second his just Desires.

On the 23d, the Marshal represented to the House, that a Conjunction of the three States of the Republic being near at Hand, it was proper to have first concerted what was to be proposed before they appeared before the Throne; upon which several Members who were deputed by the House for inspecting the State of the Tribunals, and for examining the Accounts of the Treasurers, made Report to the House of the Progress that was made in those Committees: After which the Marshal caused a Project for the regulating of the Tribunals to be read Article after Article, and on the reading of each of which asked the Assembly's Advice. Several other Matters to be treated of in the general Conference, were debated, but after a long time was spent therein without coming to a Conclusion, and Night coming on, the Marshal adjourned the House to the next Day.

On the 24th the Marshal communicated to the House, the King's Resolution of prolonging the Term of the Session, and that the 26th was agreed upon by his Majesty and the Senate for the Conjunction of the three Orders of the Republic. He further acquainted them, that the King and the Senate had approved the Project proposed by the Lower House, for determining what Funds should be payable into the Treasuries, and that they had already appointed their Deputies to this End; after which, the Marshal also nominated four Deputies on the part of the Lower House. The Deputy of Crakow having, pursuant to his Instructions, complained of the great Privileges of the Convent of Czenstochow, situate in the Palatinate of Crakow, which he alleged to be greatly prejudicial to the neighbouring Towns and the Jurisdiction of the Palatinate, that Matter was taken into Deliberation; after some Debates, one of the Members insisted on the suspending their Proceedings on that Subject, till they knew the Sentiments of the Primate of the Kingdom, and the rest of the Bishops, as to the Point of Temporal Jurisdiction, as also the Resolution of the Apostolick Nuncio relating to the bringing of Causes before Ecclesiastical Courts, because it was not proper to take any Resolution in a Matter concerning the Rights of the Clergy, but with their Concurrence: Which Motion was universally applauded by the House, and agreed to.

On the 25th, they ordered a second Reading of the Project for regulating the Tribunals, the chief Points of which are, 1st, That the Assessors or Judges shall bring in Certificates, the Laymen from the respective Marshals of the particular Dioceses, and the Ecclesiastics from their Chapters, in Witness of their being duly elected; 2dly, That every Judge, after having served in that Capacity during one Session, shall not be elected again but after the Term of 4 Years. And so far they pretty well agreed; but when it came to the Point of the Salaries of the Judges, some Members opposed their being paid out of the Cash of the Tribunals, some hereupon proposed to assign their Payment upon the Treasuries, others to lay a Tax on the several Palatinates where the Tribunals were held, but others again were for assigning it on the Tax paid by the Jews, which yearly amounted to 220000 Florins: But after very hard Debates and great Confusion the Matter remained undetermined.
